"John Brown's Dream", also known as "Brownlow's Dream", "Brown's Dream", "Brownstream", "Herve Brown's Dream" or "Johnny Bring the Jug Around the Hill" is an old-time breakdown in A Major. Fiddlers play it in AEae (Tommy Jarrell) or Standard tuning. The parts are played AABBC (Brody), AABBCDD (Phillips, Songer).

A Galax, Virginia, regional standard, but variants widely known throughout the upland South under a variety of titles. One of a family of tunes that includes "Little Rabbit", "Pretty Little Miss" and others. The tune family is a common and popular one in the Blue Ridge Mountains, where it probably originated but has since been disseminated.

Hobart Smith, of Saltville, Va., also played the tune on the banjo. Tommy Jarrell, of Mt. Airy, North Carolina, suggested that "John Brown's Dream," which he learned from his father, fiddler Ben Jarrell, was derived from "Pretty Little Miss".

The title of the tune was probably originally "Herve Brown's Dream," but the name Herve was supplanted by John because of the notoriety of the famous abolitionist who was hanged at Charles Town, Virginia in 1859 for treason committed in the raid of the U.S. Arsenal at Harper's Ferry earlier that year.

The banjo tablature is by John Letscher. His comment:
